

LORESHEETS by NIGHT

Los Angeles

A Vampire: The Masquerade 5E Add-On
by Faraz 'Fuzz' Ouraishi

DARK PACK

Storytellers
VAULT

THE ARCHANGEL NETWORK

Many ghouls suffer under the yoke of addiction - not just to vitae, but to its supplier, their regnant. Archangel may have began her career as a pirate radio host openly flaunting the Masquerade, but as a ghoul herself she found another option, and thus the Network was formed.

Now operating in cities throughout North America, the Archangel Network first and foremost serves a novel function - to assist those bound by blood in breaking their bondage and freeing their hearts and souls from the addictive rapture of their regnants' vitae. The price is simple - your own vitae or useful information. You may be a ghoul or a kindred - regardless of your nature there's a home for you in the Archangel Network as a friend, a guide, a therapist, or even just a shoulder to lean on. As kindred, you have the additional responsibility of supplying "clean" vitae with which to support the blood bound as they allow the bond to their regnant to slowly wither over months or even years.

● Calling Card: You possess one of Archangel's calling cards, with a local contact number for the Network. You can always cold call this number yourself at any time, or pass the information along to anyone wishing to free themselves of a Blood Bond, affording you a +2 bonus in social interactions with them until their bond is broken.

●● Friend with Benefits: You are a known supplier for the Network, and have made some friends as a result. Spend three dots in Allies and Contacts to reflect these friends you've made along the way, who are well aware of your nature and could pose a Masquerade risk, but can be repaid with vitae.

●●● Vitae Anonymous: You've attended Network support groups and gained a few coping tools to help you resist the bond. Once per session you can choose to resist a command from your regnant, effectively lowering your Bond Strength by one for a scene.

●●●● Network Firewall: You've gained enough goodwill in the Network to warrant support in a pinch. Once per story you can call on the Network to send you skilled assistance in the form of two ghouls made from the Gifted Mortal template. The Storyteller has discretion on the exact skillset of these ghouls, however they will generally be well suited to the task required of them, though that task should specifically be related to your survival in some way - abuse of their goodwill could garner censure by the Network.

●●●●● Angel's Whispers: You have met the infamous Archangel herself, and have a good enough repartee with her to warrant an exchange of information. Once per story you can contact the Network directly and arrange a physical meeting with Archangel in order to exchange information - at the Storyteller's discretion she will give you precise and detailed information on a single Kindred in the region in exchange for vitae as payment.

THE LAST ROUND

The Last Round is a rather unassuming bar - nestled under the I-10 overpass and astride the LA River, its location may evoke images of a troll guarding the bridge, but nestled within is a veritable pack of lions. Nines Rodriguez, the man who reluctantly calls Downtown Los Angeles his Barony, stands sentinel here with his coterie, sometimes colloquially referred to as the Last Rounders.

Though only Nines himself was alive to see Jeremy MacNeil found the Anarch Free States, each of the Last Rounders have built a rep of their own as fierce defenders of what Anarchs stand for - no Princes, no Traditions, just Kindred making their own way through the endless night. MacNeil may be gone, but his dream is still alive and well, and the Free States attract all sorts of strays and runaways, with Nines taking them under his wing to show them a new way to live out their unlives, without Elders holding their leash. Maybe you're one of these or a genuine homegrown Anarch, but there are worse crews to hang with than the Last Rounders.

Lore

● First Round's on Me: You've spent a lot of time patrolling and training with the Last Round coterie and have picked up a few skills. Add two specialties in Firearms and/or Brawl, both can be in the same skill if you wish. As a regular in the crew, you will be expected to assist in defending the Last Round and their turf when called upon, and they'll be pretty pissed if you flake on them.

●● Damsel in Distressed Leather: Damsel the revolutionary has taken a shine to you, and the two of you have taken to the streets, fighting for The Cause and raising hell. Gain a dot of Status (Anarchs), and distribute a further two dots among Status (Anarchs), Allies, Contacts, and Influence with a rebellious group. You've stepped on some toes along the way, however, and picked up a one-dot Enemy who has been angered by your rhetoric.

●●● Helter Skelter: You've gained the notice of Nines' second, the Gangrel Skelter, who acts as a three-dot Mawla and, once per story, can be asked to come to your aid, be it in a fight or to help you find safety from the sun in the middle of nowhere. Boons aren't free, even for Anarchs, and he'll expect you to handle some work on behalf of the Last Rounders - and they're not gonna be milk runs.

●●●● Room and Ward: As a trusted ally of the Last Rounders, you've gained the privilege/duty of guarding a stash site or asset for the crew while being able to use the site as a temporary haven. At the start of each story, you can distribute five dots in Haven in any way you wish among Base Rating, Hidden Armory, Cell, Watchmen, Location, Postern, and Security System, working with the Storyteller to establish your new Haven's details. Wherever it is, it's important to the Last Rounders in some way for the next little while, and they've provided you with the means, muscle, and munitions to defend it. Fail to do so, and you better believe they won't be happy.

●●●●● The Man vs The Myth: At one point or another, Nines felt it important to impart on you some wisdom with regard to lupines. Perhaps you helped him out in a jam or were there to personally witness his legendary defeat of a lupine in combat. You add two dice to all combat rolls against lupines if you're aware of their nature, or can add the die to any sensing rolls if you know you're being hunted by one. Furthermore, once per story you can automatically heal an extra level of Aggravated Damage as long as both levels of damage were sustained directly from the fangs or claws of a lupine. Unfortunately, your reputation as a hunter of lupines precedes you whether earned or not, and you gain a two-dot Infamy (Lupines) Flaw, which could get you into the bad kind of trouble.

THE WYRD SISTERS

When San Diego fell to the Second Inquisition, many of its kindred citizens fled north to Los Angeles. Among them were three Tremere 'sisters' - Hester, Violet Luna, and Kyoko, independent practitioners who took up residence in the sometimes-disputed Baron of the Valley, Victor Temple's domain north of the city proper. Operating a small new age mystical charm and bookstore called the 'The Mystic Circle', the Wyrd Sisters coterie generally tries to keep a low profile, having learned the harsh lesson of what fate befalls those who draw the attention of the Inquisition.

As possibly the only remaining Tremere coterie left within Los Angeles city limits, this often puts their skills in high demand, and Hester and Violet Luna are sharp enough to understand the nature of kindred society and its social compacts. As such, the three are known to often make deals and offer boons to those kindred willing to assist them and keep their trust.

● The Mystic Circlet: You've ingratiated yourself to the sisters enough to have free access to the many back rooms in their bookstore. You may consider the shop the equivalent of a two-dot Library Merit, which behaves as per the Haven Merit (V5 Core page 189) though you obviously cannot use the bookstore as a haven. You make use of these tomes at the pleasure of the sisters, of course, and they may rescind this favor if angered or demand minor boons of you to maintain this access.

●● Bookish: You're an avid reader, spending much of your free time at The Mystic Circle just reading about whatever you can get your hands on. Once per story you may add two dice to any Academics, Occult, or Politics roll reflecting something you happened to read recently and just remembered in the moment. How fortuitous!

●●● Violet Luna Nights: Violet Luna is a skilled soothsayer and oneiromancer, willing to trade her skills for a minor boon. Once per story you can consult her to directly interpret a vision or dream and decipher the omens and signs contained within to provide a piece of useful information you otherwise did not have access to. She can alternatively be asked to employ her magical skull, Herman, to ascertain whether a person in your company (or custody) is telling the truth for a scene.

●●●● Special K: You've become pals with the youngest of the sisters, Kyoko, and on occasion the two of you go out for a night on the town. Once per story you can invite Kyoko out for the evening (she doesn't get out much), and she will accompany you on whatever you get up to, under the Storyteller's direction. Despite her naivete and tendency to put her foot in her mouth, she is a master of pyromancy, though her aim could use some work. Just remember - keep her safe, and bring her home three hours before sunrise, or Hester will be pissed!

●●●●● Forge of Hester: The closest thing to a matriarch for the sisters, Hester is always appreciative of any and all that are supportive of their coterie and come to their defense. Once per chronicle she can create an item or object of miraculous quality for you, or repair a broken mystical one which you already have in your possession. The nature of this item or object and its power(s) should be a discussion with the Storyteller, and can be taken from another Loresheet. This wondrous item is not without its flaws, however, and avarice is ever present in the hearts of kindred. Invariably, someone will hear of this item and as a result seek to steal it from you - you gain a two-dot Enemy Flaw hell bent on liberating said item from your possession.

HOLLYWOOD FOREVER

The Hollywood Forever cemetery conceals the entrance to one of Los Angeles' best kept secrets - the Nosferatu Warrens, home to 'Gorgeous' Gary Golden and his brood of childer. Like so many other Nosferatu, the Hollywood Forever coterie deals in secrets and information, the most valuable of all Kindred commodities. Despite their location and clan's curse, the Nosferatu more than anything else like to be taken seriously and not looked down upon, and it is not uncommon for Gary to host 'dinner' for those willing to descend down under Los Angeles to break (very moldy) bread. Those who respect the customs will often come out ahead, while those who do not... let's just say Gary and his two childer are the only known members of the coterie. They are, after all, Nosferatu, so one can never be quite sure how many others may be lurking out of sight, blades in hand.

Lore

●● The Condor: The hacker, Mitnick, has agreed to help you out on occasion - you possess a burner phone with some specialized software that can be used to bypass electronic security in any device with a reasonably modern connection interface (wired or wireless). Once per story, you can take two extra dice on any Technology or Larceny roll related to hacking or security overrides. You must dispose of the phone with some immediacy and get a replacement from Mitnick in the downtime if you don't want the authorities to catch up to you.

●● Fashionista: Imalia has taken it upon herself to design your wardrobe, and what an interesting wardrobe it is. Barbed wire, twisted metal pieces, a rusty fork, all these and more can be accessories to your ensemble. Incredibly garish and bizarre, the outfit penalizes any social rolls at the discretion of the Storyteller, however it acts as a surprisingly effective, albeit very improvised light piercing weapon, imparting up to a max +2 Superficial Damage with Brawl attacks. This weaponry is well concealed into the overall "bold" design - you gain two dice on Stealth and Subterfuge rolls to conceal its weaponry. Imalia is fickle, however, and not wearing her designs in public at least once per story may offend her and find this wardrobe mysteriously vanishing one day.

●●● Float Down Here: You have memorized the layout of the vast majority of the sewer and maintenance access tunnels below large sections of the city. You gain two-dice on any roll involving navigating, avoiding pursuit/detection, or hunting in the tunnels. Gary would never allow a written record of this sort of information, so you had better have a good memory.

●●●● Warren Piece (Nosferatu only): Gary has granted you a little patch of the Nosferatu Warren to call your own. acting as a Haven with Base Rating 2, Postern 3, Security System 2, and Location with the proviso that the Location Merit specifically adds +4 Difficulty to any roll attempting to locate it. Unfortunately, the Warrens are exceedingly Creepy, and impart a four-dice penalty instead of the base two-dice. Kindred with a Prey Exclusion that includes rats need not apply, as Gary expects any and all residents to attend family dinners.

●●●●● Gossip Gary: You and Gary have an understanding - tit for tat, you give him something, he'll give you something in return, that 'something' always taking the form of information the other party doesn't know. Once per session you can call upon Gary and attempt to trade information - whether the information you are offering is as valuable as what is asked of Gary is entirely up to the Storyteller, however it is well known that Gary has odd tastes in what he finds 'useful', and sometimes something as simple as knowing what a Baron's favorite color is can actually be worth divulging the location of all of the havens a fellow kindred uses, for example. Once per story you can also ask Gary to find out a specific piece of information on your behalf, though in this case he will name his own price, and often it may be steeper than just finding out the information on your own.

SPOILS OF THE SECT WARS

Los Angeles has had two attempts at Praxis since Jeremy MacNeil founded the Anarch Free States - the first by Sebastian LaCroix at the turn of the millenium, and most recently by Vannevar Thomas. Both attempts ended in abject failure. One cannot say if the Camarilla will make a third attempt, but one thing is certain - each time they leave, it's good for business.

Not unlike the wars of the kine, a sect war often leaves a great deal of wealth behind for those who are willing, and unscrupulous enough, to take it. Not all spoils are taken from casualties, and often the most valuable fortune comes in the form of information or favors, not physical goods. For every treasure gained there are often two enemies formed - a jealous peer, out for themselves, and perhaps the wronged party, out for revenge to reclaim what is theirs. The spoils are not for the faint of heart, but then again, what is in this endless night?

● Ashes to Ashes: During one of the sect wars you were able to secure the ashes of a fallen ancilla. Maybe you were involved in their death, maybe not, but it's yours now. You're not sure exactly which clan resides in your little urn, only the Storyteller does, but these ashes could prove valuable for various rituals or alchemical formulae.

●● Napoleonic Compact: The erstwhile Prince LaCroix was known to employ the LAPD as his personal hit squad. While you don't have nearly the same sway he did, you've "inherited" his contract with a Captain on the SWAT team. They act as a two-dot LAPD Contact who knows exactly what you are, and once per story you can employ your Reliable Informant status to report a crime directly to SWAT and have them mobilize with a warrant. Care should be taken, as sending them on a wild goose chase with no hard evidence to be found may very well find them calling in their own favor - to the Second Inquisition.

●●● Dear Diary: Before his mansion was burned to the ground, Alistair Grout recorded a series of audio diaries containing secret observations about the prominent Kindred of the city. One of the Malkavian Primogen's audio logs has ended up in your possession - once per story you can delve into the diary and learn a hidden secret about a Kindred who was active during Grout's tenure. This knowledge cannot be used as proof of anything, but information is power in the endless night.

●●●● Personal Goliath (Blood Sorcerer only): Before the Tremere Chantry in the Magic Castle was abandoned, through a stroke of luck you managed to bind one of Maximillian Strauss' gargoyles. This gargoyle acts as a special four-dot retainer, however it is only good at one thing - defending a site. Once per story you can command the gargoyle to defend a certain site, and it will do so to the death. The Storyteller can refer to the Wight (V5 Core pg 375) but swap its Strength and Dexterity values, exchange Celerity for Protean, and lower the Blood Potency to 1 for a baseline suggested statistics sheet for the gargoyle. Publicly flaunting one of Strauss' servitors is terribly unwise, of course, and if he or any others loyal to House Tremere discover what you've done the entire House will most likely come for your blood.

●●●●● Is That What I Think It is?: Rumor has it that Vannevar Thomas owned a piece of the original Book of Nod, carved in Enochian. You know this rumor is true, because you happened to "acquire" the fragment when the Inquisition dismantled the Camarilla. With such a mythical item comes status, rivals, influence, insight, prophecy, all of these and more. There are no specific rules to encompass the breadth of what owning a piece of the tablet that may have been carved by Caine himself entails, the Storyteller must decide. Once per chronicle the tablet can be directly employed to achieve something miraculous, be it a new prophecy, thickening thin blood, or something even more. One thing is certain - others will want it, and they will destroy you and anything related to you to get it. Do you dare take hold of history itself?